During the summer of 2009, The Josselyn Center will offer a therapeutic day camp for children between the ages of 8 and 12 who might not be able to fit in at typical summer camp programs due to social, emotional, or behavioral difficulties. Day camp programming will include: arts and crafts, sensory activities, outdoor activities, informal learning, recreational activities and much more, all designed to improve campers' self-esteem, social skills, and behavior management. The Josselyn Center's Therapeutic Summer Day Camp may be appropriate for children who might need more structure than is offered at traditional day camps, but children must be able to succeed without one-on-one support. (Staff:Children = 1:5) Scholarships are available. Please inquire.
